Is there a way to surpass Monitech's CLT?

2019/08/19

Hello Shaun! Well, I see that your father is really serious about knowing where you are) Monitech's CLT is a quite serious gadget that tracks its location in three ways: using GPS, GLONASS and cellular module. In other words it uses 860-1575,42 MHz frequencies band. So it's quite hard to cheat it. Monitech's Car Lighter Tracker works while plugged into your car's lighter slot or into 12V DC adapter. CLT is usually used for fleet controlling, improving the efficiency of navigation systems and for security, because it can warn the police about all intrusions when your car is parked. Also that gadget ensures proper functionality of your GPS navigator even in urban areas and multistory parking lots. The tracking issues are already very popular on the Internet. The easiest way to solve your problems will be jamming the signals of the CLT. And we have a proper solution! I think that Monitech's CLT jammer would do the trick, and make you disappear from the radars. I hope that will help.
