Can someone use Samsung DV300F in the wrong way?

2019/12/04

Hello Mark! Samsung DV300F is a very nice photo camera with embedded WiFi connection. It is a 16 megapixel camera that has 25mm lens with wide angle, 5x optical zoom, and two displays - 3-inch main LCD and 1.5-inch front-facing. Both are big enough and very easy to use. It has a Children Mode with some games in addition to the primary functions and features. The price in US will be $199.99 for each camera. Now lets talk about Samsung DV300F from the other side - its WiFi connectivity. On the one hand, it is very useful if you are the owner of such camera and have no desire to use it in the wrong way. The WiFi allows you to send freshly shot pictures right to the Picasa, Facebook or other website where you are willing to share them. On the other hand, bad guys can use this feature to take your photos from far distance (remember 5x zoom?) and send them to the remote server in a blink of an eye, so even if you will manage to spot and catch them and break their camera your photos will be already gone. And blackmailing is probably not the thing you want to become a victim of, right? So if you want to be sure that the situation which I have just described will never happen to you, you need to prevent Samsung DV300F WiFi connection sending your pictures away and, of course, catch those bad guys as soon as you have spotted them picturing you.
