How can I protect my house from ReconRobotics Recon Scout XT?

2019/07/10

Hello Dean! US Army has already ordered 1100 units of Recon Scout XT robots from ReconRobotics. Recon Scout XT is the improved version of the Recon Scout IR model. It is equipped with small camera for indoor and outdoor surveillance. It also has the infrared optical system that allows to enhance the visibility in the dark environments and even in the absolute darkness. This robot is water-resistant and can move practically on any terrain due to the special wheel structure. It can be thrown from 30 feet height and survive multiple drops on the concrete surface. Recon Scout XT has a weight of 1.2 pounds and it can be easily thrown where the reconnaissance must be conducted. It can also be attached to the pole or other similar thing for more comfortable surveillance. The robots are remotely controlled. And by the way, 2200 units have been already deployed by the military forces and many other federal, state and even local agencies. If you want to have complete protection against this kind of surveillance technology, you need to break the connection between Recon Scout XT and its remote control. When this smart robot left without human control, it becomes helpless and stops its surveillance activity.
