Can someone explain electronic jamming to me?

2019/12/03

Hello Lilly! It is great that you are interested in the complete understanding of the full jamming process! It is really nice when people are getting to know all the aspects of the jammers, their working process and all parts they consist of. So, let's make you more educated! ;) The main principle of electronic jamming is to create electronic signal which is often called electronic noise and by doing that block mobile phone signals in the selected frequency range. The blocked signal simply cannot reach any mobile phone in the jamming range and they receive no signal. This message will be seen by all mobile phone users in the blocked area. There is another way of doing that, it is even more funny. Signal jammer catches the outgoing signal of the cell phone, modifies it to the frequency of received by this mobile phone signal, and sends it back to the source. In this way the cell phone blabber will hear own voice instead of expected answer of his or her call and be also blocked from receiving any call from outside. As you can see, the whole electronic jamming process is quite fun thing, and now you know how it is working! So browse through other questions and discover more interesting facts about signal jammers! :)
